

Research Title: The Development of Local Museum to Enhance Creative Education

Authors: Kiriboon Jongwutiwes, Maream Nillapun , Wannapa SangWattanakul

The Development of Local Museum to Enhance Creative Education was a research-and-development research. The objectives were 1) to make a preliminary study on local museums, 2) to study the local museums' development process of creative activities, and 3) to study the achievements of the development activities of the local museums to enhance creative education. The research was conducted in Participatory Action Research among the researchers, the administrators or the local museum curators, teachers, students, community leaders, and local people. Mixed Methods Research was employed between Quantitative Methods and Qualitative Methods.

The findings were as followed:

1. The preliminary data of local museums on 1) location and community context, 2) founding history, 3) management and exhibition, and 4) activities and knowledge transfer, indicated that the 16 local museums under study were distributed in 8 provinces of the western region. There were 2 local museums under study from each province. The location of the local museums was diverse: 4 in schools, 2 in Buddhist temples, 2 in archeological sources/areas, 3 in official places, and 5 in community areas. The museum management was run by working committee. The museum has knowledge transfer activities by exhibitions, demonstrations, training activities, displays, and community connection activities.

2. The museums' creative activities development process had 5 steps: 1) use of SWOT analysis to study community context, 2) design of activities, 3) implementation of the activities with community participation, 4) evaluation of the activities, and 5) lessons learned together.

3. The study on the development of local museum to enhance creative education covered 5 aspects. 1) Process: all projects had been prepared in advance, by coordination with people in the field, those involved with local museum, and those participated in activities, so as to understand the area, to consider the appropriateness of community context, participants and available resources, and the activities were conducted as planned and evaluated. 2) Output: there were 2 types, quantitative and qualitative output. As for quantitative output, they were publication, manual, label, video, painting, sculpture, crafts, poetry, short film, and anime; and as for qualitative output, they were interest, satisfaction, enthusiasm, liveliness, happiness, pride, assertive, imagination, and creativity. 3) Outcome: there were improvement in landscape, connection with learning source in community and available resources, which affected all those concerned, such as, students, teachers, parents, community leaders, and knowledgeable in community, to have more knowledge, to be proud, to appreciate, and to apply. 4) Impact: there were construction and improvement in many local museums; data base and website were made available; education institution and local administration organization were interested; community people had better relationship and attitude due to the learning process. And 5) Sustainability: there were publication and media, local curriculum which integrated local museum with learning and teaching, local administration organization which realized the value of local museums and planned to support continuously.

This is to share with you the attached letter about your submission for the International Journal of Arts and Sciences' (IJAS) International Conference for Academic Disciplines in Austria, which has been accepted by our reviewers in a double-blind review process.

If you need a Schengen Visa to visit Austria and its surrounding countries during the conference period and you stated this in your online submission application, a second page is attached to your letter requesting the cooperation of the Austrian Consulate in granting you a visa. A visa application is available online by clicking here. The Consulate's requirements are described here (even though this government website is primarily meant for those who apply from the UK).

We thank you for your interest in our conference.

Sincerely,
Mark Bridge
